Predicting Diabetes using Classification Techniques
Minimum Viable Product

This project's objective is to determine the best algorithm to predict diabetes accurately using a variety of machine learning methods.

After exploring and visualizing the data, we found that blood glucose level greatly influences diabetic positive outcomes. Through this project, people will be able to predict whether they have diabetes or not based on their daily measurements.